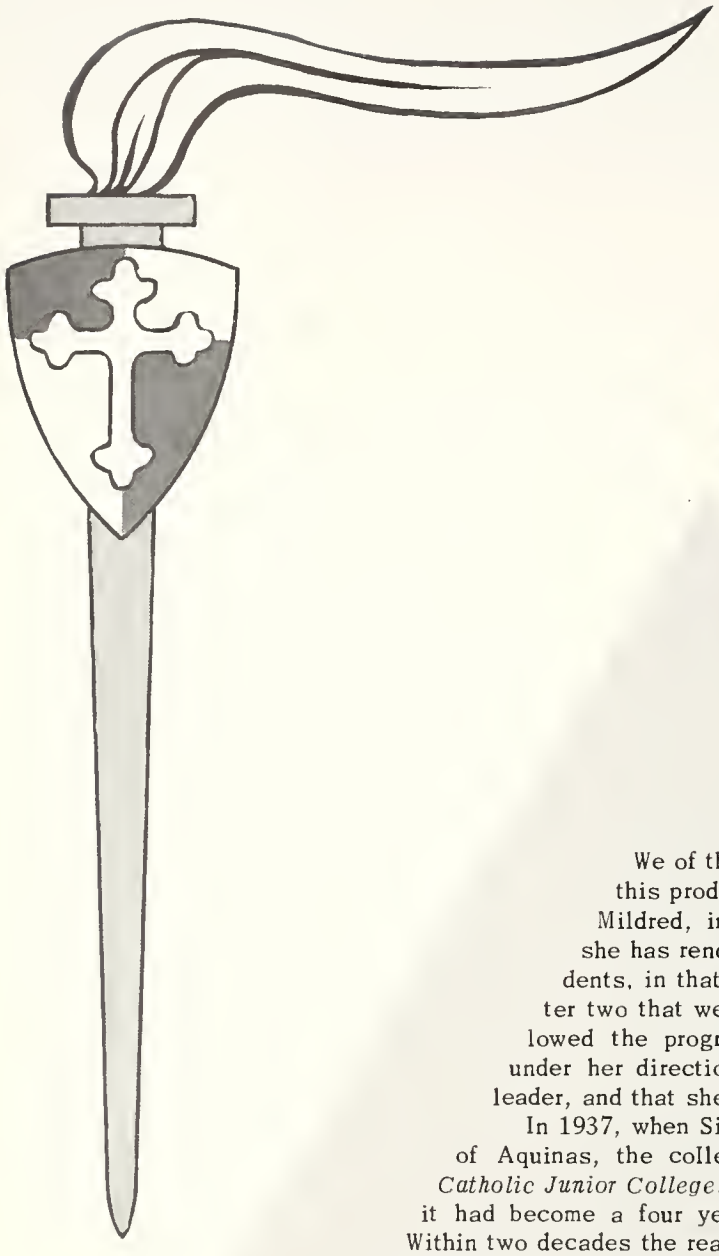
In Memoriam

To the late John F. Kennedy, a president who gave his life for his country.

"... last full measure of devotion"

Let us mourn with our minds rather than our hearts, lest we forget too soon.

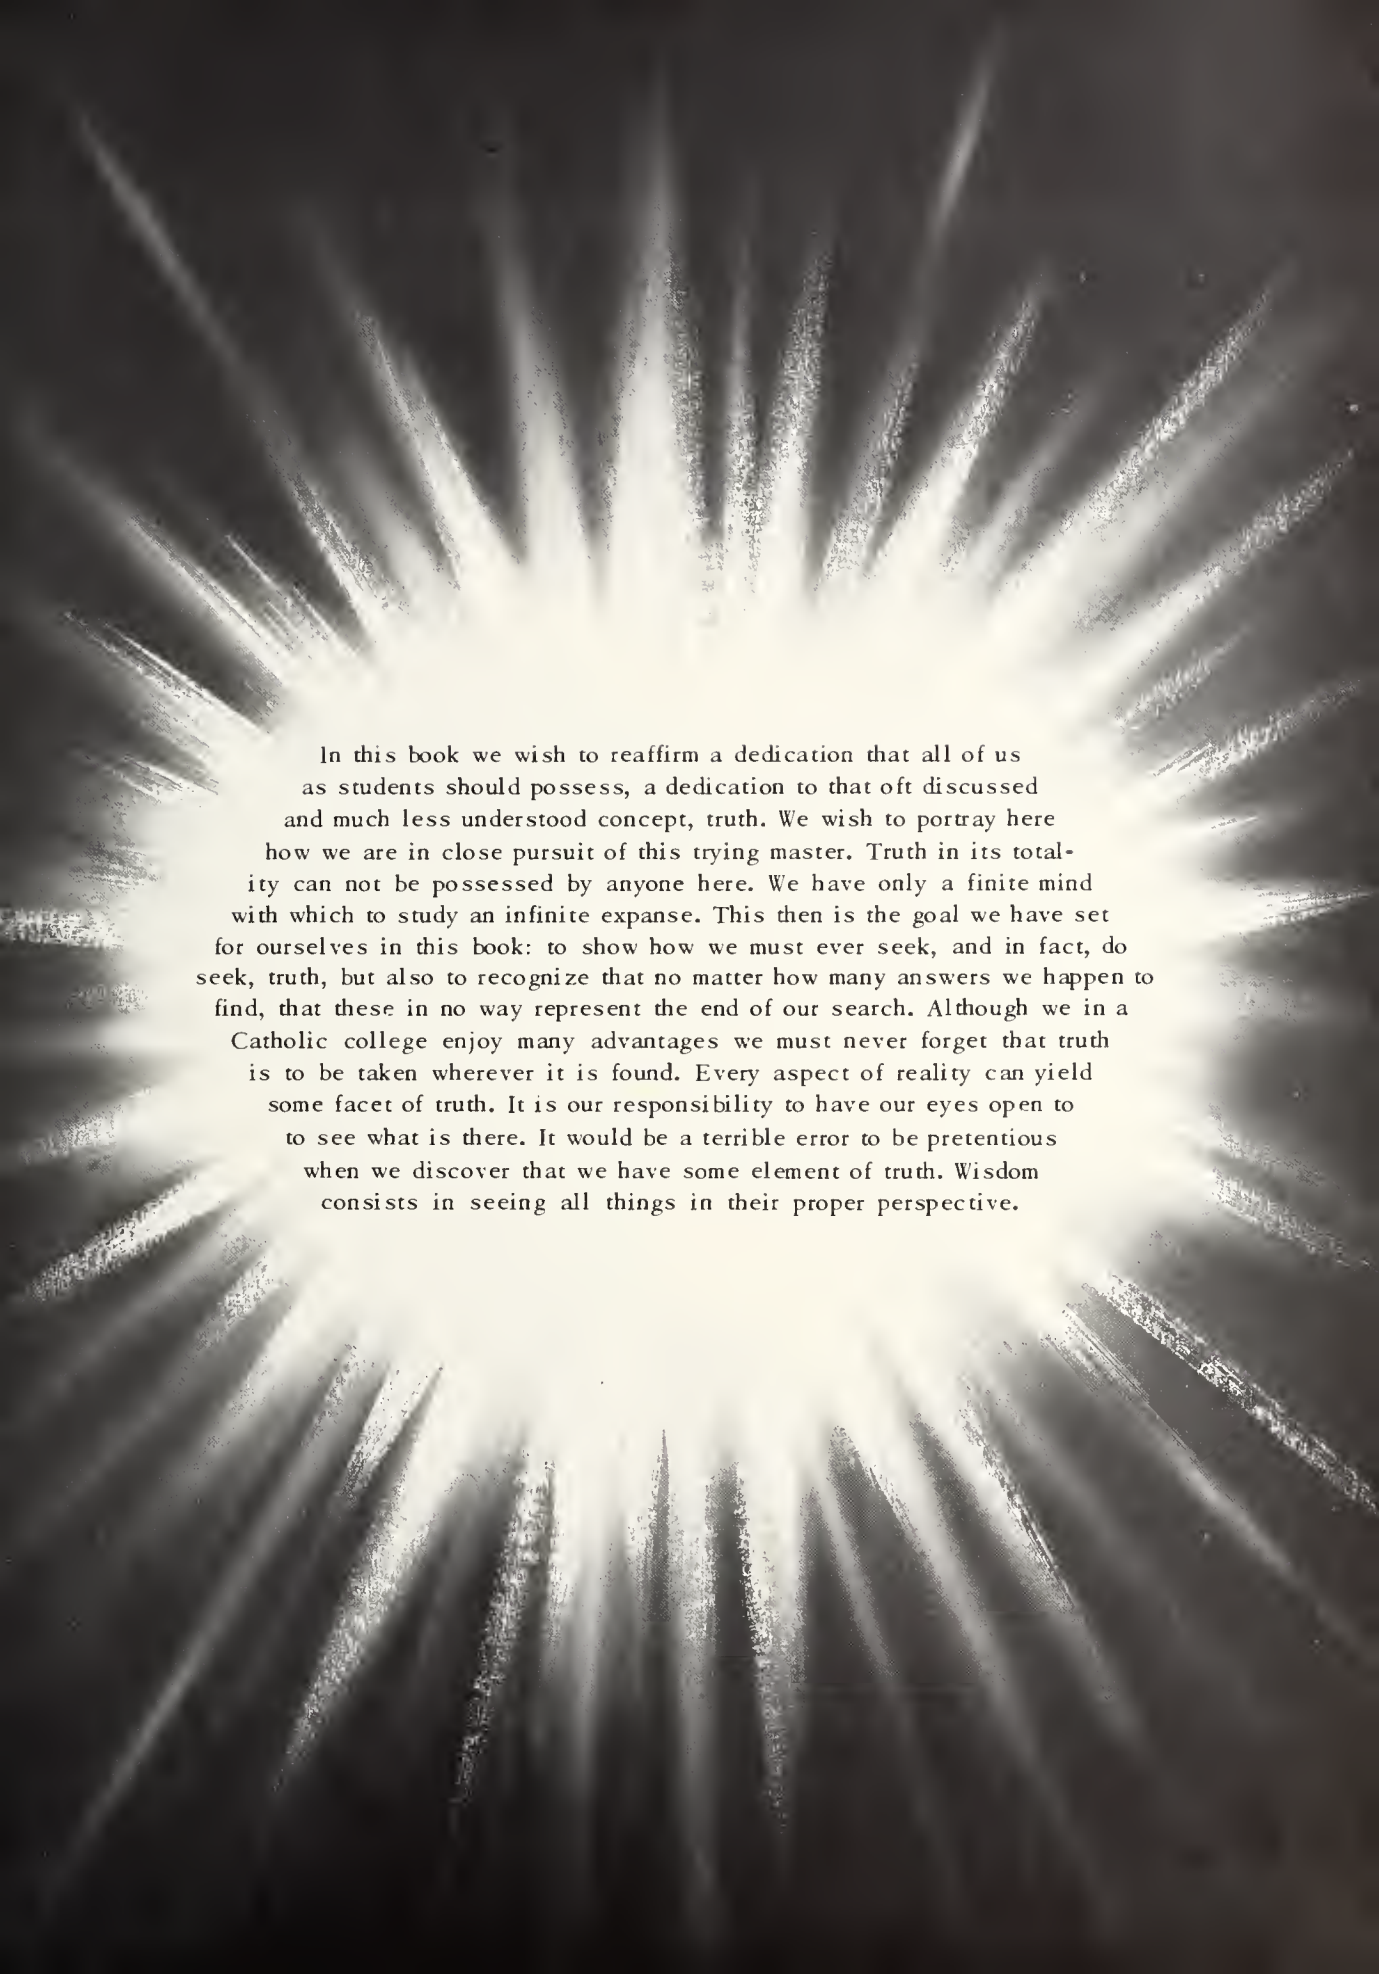


We of the editorial staff would like to dedicate this production to our Dean of yesteryear, Sister Mildred, in recognition of the great service that she has rendered to God, country, college, and students, in that order. It is for her interest in the latter two that we salute her now. Anyone who has followed the progress of Aquinas College while it was under her direction can not but admit that she was the leader, and that she gave unselfishly of herself.

In 1937, when Sister Mildred took on the office of Dean of Aquinas, the college was a two year school known as Catholic Junior College. Only a short three years passed until it had become a four year institution under its present name. Within two decades the real growth of the college had begun. The Administration building was actualized, and was followed by Albertus Magnus science hall, and Regina Hall. Extensive adjacent property was acquired, and St. Joseph's dormitory was entering its construction phase.

We trace this brief history of the college because we feel that it is a history of the service rendered by Sister Mildred. She has been the vital force behind the expansion. However such physical expansion is only symbolic of the internal expansion which has so obviously occured. These physical expressions in themselves are not important.

Their greatness is derived from the end for which they are the means. It was for academic greatness that Sister Mildred strove. It was this idea that motivated her to attract more and better teachers, raise scholastic standards, and provide facilities as they were made possible. It has been her foresight that has given us our present vantage point. Such a source of energy and unselfish devotion deserves our attention, gratitude, and esteem. Holding such a dedication to be some small token of this esteem, we do dedicate our endeavor here to Sister Mildred.



In this book we wish to reaffirm a dedication that all of us as students should possess, a dedication to that oft discussed and much less understood concept, truth. We wish to portray here how we are in close pursuit of this trying master. Truth in its totality can not be possessed by anyone here. We have only a finite mind with which to study an infinite expanse. This then is the goal we have set for ourselves in this book: to show how we must ever seek, and in fact, do seek, truth, but also to recognize that no matter how many answers we happen to find, that these in no way represent the end of our search. Although we in a Catholic college enjoy many advantages we must never forget that truth is to be taken wherever it is found. Every aspect of reality can yield some facet of truth. It is our responsibility to have our eyes open to to see what is there. It would be a terrible error to be pretentious when we discover that we have some element of truth. Wisdom consists in seeing all things in their proper perspective.

The Administration is a governing body that governs not for the benefit of itself, but for others. It provides the leadership that allows the College to move forward. It provides direction and impetus to the natural drive to grow and expand. Its aim is to facilitate the acquisition of the proper goals of a liberal education.

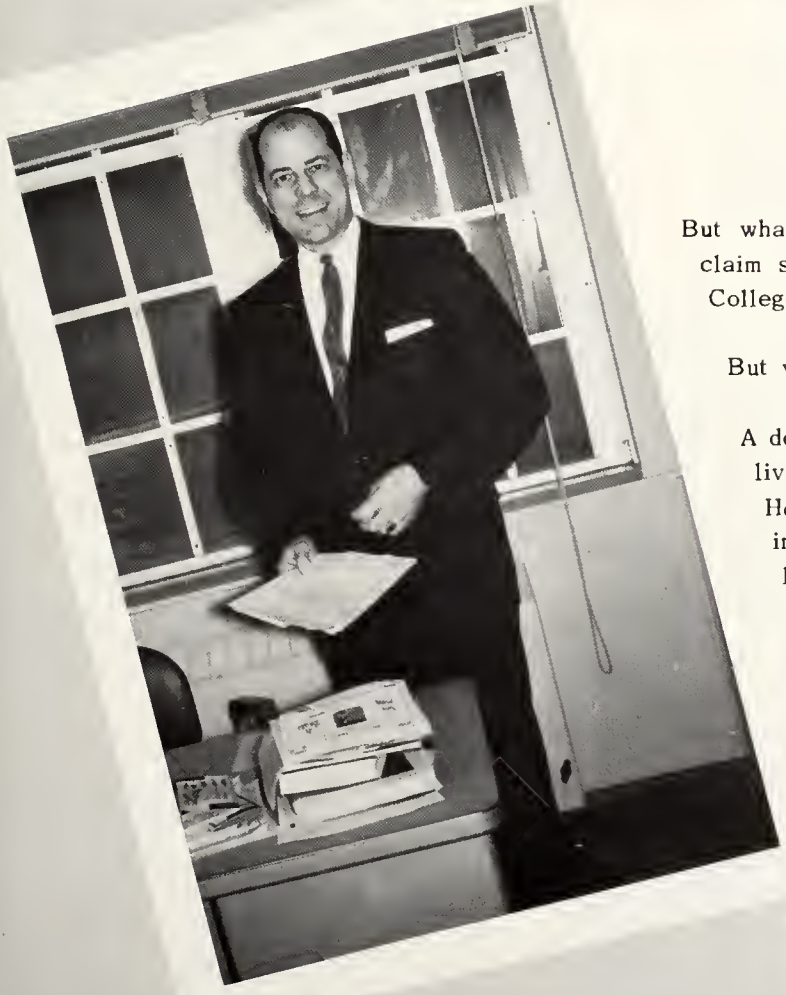
Eugene W. Smith
Dean of Men



But what is a dean? We have three persons who claim such a title here at Aquinas, a dean of the College, a dean of women, and a dean of men.

But what is a dean?

A dean is a person interested in people as they live and operate in the educational institution. He provides the forward thrust that initiates in us the educational process at the advanced level. He is interested in all aspects of the students' lives, hoping to strike the golden proportion that is the most conducive to intellectual progress. All of this grand interest is crowned with officialdom. Our deans' concern for the students in their charge is not only an academic one, but a sincere one.

ACTIVITIES I

There exists in everyone a drive to be creative. It is mandatory that the educational institution provide opportunities for the expression of this vital force, and in many different modes. This our College does. There are opportunities to dance, sing, write, act, paint, and communicate in many other ways. The important sameness in all of these is creativity and communication.

PAVLA

The Papal Volunteers for Latin America carry the torch of learning from the mother flame to the under-developed areas of Latin America, serving the interests of the Church there. Theirs is a missionary task, and they are invested with the teaching authority of the bishop for this end. The most important element of this plan is that it involves people helping people. It is closer to the christian concept of giving than most aid programs realize. It is a true giving of one's self.

Tom LaPres is the most recent one to be enkindled with the enthusiasm that is characteristic of the PAVLA program.

Mr. Felix Valbuena, director of CSEP, speaking at a luncheon, explains the program of student exchange. Miss Gertrude M. Horgan, the local director of the organization, is hostess to his visit here at Aquinas.

This year Aquinas participated in the Cultural Student Exchange Program. This meant that last summer several Aquinas students went to Colombia for the double purpose of studying Colombian culture, and working in the social environment there. In "exchange," a group of Colombian students came here for a period of comparable study.

The purpose of this program is the achievement of a mutual increased understanding between the people of both countries.

Students on arrival from Colombia took part in one of the initial orientation classes.

Who says that women are no more curious than men?

This past year the students of AQUINAS COLLEGE have been given an opportunity of a life time. They were able to live and to work along side students from a different cultural background. This experience should have benefited both the visitors and the visited. By seeing people of a different background work and live, our own culture is viewed in a sharper focus, and both systems are appreciated so much better. Students of Columbia we thank you.

HERALD

Therese Van Rooy serves as one of those ever-important typists

The Aquinas Herald is many things to many people. To some it is a responsibility of meeting deadlines; to others it is an assignment for an article; but to most of the students it is a source of information. It serves simultaneously as a training ground in the art of communication and as a communication proper. The Herald plays the role of an informed leader in campus life.

Artists are gifted people. Theirs is a very individualized view of the world. They "see" things which perhaps the rest of us miss, and their talent is that they are capable of making these abstract "visions" into concrete realities.

ACTIVITIES II

The few years spent in college constitute an important segment of time in a student's life. It is a time when interests are formed, strengthened, and directed. The academic program is not always enough to satisfy such interests. This is where the extracurricular activities are important. They form an important supplement to the regular academic program. They help to give the student the complete education characteristic of a liberal arts college.

ATHLETICS

Mr. Ed Farhat – Athletic Director and Admissions Counselor

Mr. Ralph Goldstein – Always attentive to needs of young men

The Athletic Department of any college is an integral cog in an important wheel of progress. The men who make up this department at Aquinas College are indicative of the potential of such a working force. With the time consuming task of coaching winning teams, these men are utilized in the fields of administration, development, counseling, and instruction. Superimposed on these jobs is the task of setting manly example for future leaders-of-men. Aquinas is proud of its Athletic Staff as an outstanding example of that dedicated profession of talented men, who give of themselves that others may profit.

Mr. Richard Blake – Exemplificative of important instructive field

Mr. Richard Mc Cormick – Administrative duties in capable hands

Having faced one of the most formidable basketball schedules in the school's history, the 1963-64 Aquinas Tommies turned in a reputable record of 10 wins and 11 losses. In his first year at the helm Coach Ralph Goldstein has a splendid beginning on what appears to be a Michigan sports power in the years ahead. The Toms were led all season by veteran Ray Bauer who averaged almost 20 points per game, Garry Fewless, the Tommies' hot-shot little guard, and a promising freshman rebounding sensation, Dennis Alexander.

CROSS COUNTRY

The sport of cross country is in the primin stages at Aquinas College. Coached b Mr. Curtis L. Butters, the Aquinas harrier were led by John Haslem and Dan Jaskiewic in 1963. While victories were few, the spor of cross country presented an individua challenge to each participating team member

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

Andy Robel blows a pass reception as Jim Novakowski pours on the speed

The intramural sports program, under the direction of Mr. Ralph Goldstein, had a very successful year. The sphere of activities included football, basketball, and softball. Most of the competition was supplied by the senior class. The seniors won the outright championship in football and softball and participated on the winning basketball team.

Each Thursday afternoon the Tommie Keglers make their way to East Recreation to compete in the friendly sport of bowling. This mixed group of enthusiasts find that they can best release most of their inhibitions by belting away at the tenpins with large black spheroids. At the end a gay banquet is held at which awards are presented to those who have proven themselves most deserving.

This year's officers were: President, Kathy Kirkwood; secretary, Jan Anderson; and treasurer, Ginger Jackson.

TENNIS

The Aquinas tennis team, under the able leadership of Mr. Richard Blake, has taken as its goal an improvement over last year's showing. The netters have a good returning squad of Howard Smith, Dan Nulty, Tom Williams, Max Otto and a new addition, Jim Reed, a transfer student from Michigan State. The hopes are very high, and the team spirit increases with each practice. As early spring commences the entire horizon looks very bright for the 1964 Tommie tennis team.

A deliberate smash with a dainty movement results in a definite end product — VICTORY!

The Aquinas Golf Team has become a powerful giant in Midwest America. Taking on such impressive foes as The Universities of Louisville, Bellarmine, Kentucky and Notre Dame, The TOMMIES have proven themselves a formidable corps of aggressive athletes bent on victory. Coached by Mr. Dick McCormick, an outstanding strategist, the Toms are assured of another great year on the Links. Balanced team play along with strong individual initiative have made the Toms a principal contender for the N. C. A. A. College Division Golf Crown.

The Aquinas Chorus performs at the Hootenanny during GALA WEEKEND.

The Queen's court was composed of Cherri Mann, Patricia Granger, and Kathy Ofenstein. They were escorted by James Novakoski, Bill Osbourne, and Tom Sullivan respectively. The ensemble was led by Ruth Fleischmann and Father Austin.

The interested members of the club

The newly formed International Relations Club is an indication of the growth that is occurring at Aquinas today. It represents a gradual broadening of interests from the very narrow horizon of the front gate to a world-wide interest. This organization recognizes that we are all world citizens and that all people must strive to understand one another.
